OBJECTIVES OF THE SEMINAR

High expectations of masses and requirement of government for providing built environment in a short time has forced technocrats engaged in design and construction of civil infrastructure to revamp their roles in the delivery process and look for alternative fast and cost effective solutions using new processes. This calls for taking meaningful steps to promote development with quality assured technologies so as to make it available to vulnerable sections of the society. This also necessitates research and development activity in the field to enhance availability of built environment through rapid construction. Rapid construction is a systematic approach to deliver projects with complexity in construction within the parameters of limited time schedule, contract agreement, approved construction method and to client satisfaction. There is dire need for paradigm shift in approach by introducing alternate fast track construction practices. Researchers worldwide have made significant efforts to find sustainable and fast track affordable technologies. World over different material and construction techniques, mostly factory made in controlled quality environment
